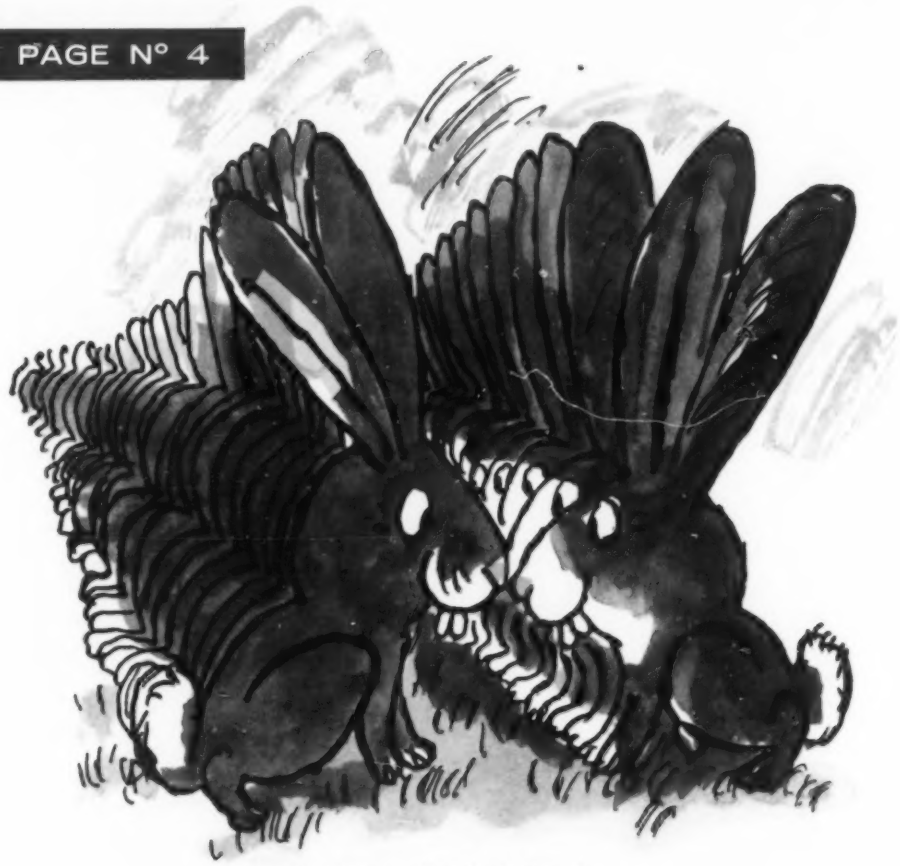
GUINNESS. PETS PAGE Nº 4

Life and Litters



Common or garden rabbits
Have most reproductive habits;
In every way, we'd say, they were terrific!
No matter what the breed,
They breed and breed and BREED...
The beast, to say the least of it's prolific.

The lettuce for their lunch,
That your rabbits love to munch,
Can be got for all the lot in half a second.
Oh, it's such a simple pet
That you simply can't regret
That Bunny, though such fun, is quite so fecund.

To buy a buck and doe
Will not cost you much, you know,
If they're small 'uns–Himalayans, Silvers, Dutch...
While a handy sort of feller
With a hammer in the cellar,
Quickly knocks a wooden box up for a hutch.

WARNING NOTE

Wild and country rabbits are destructive in their habits. When they spot them farmers pot them in their spinneys. And the missus pots them, too, for a tasty rabbit stew – Ah! How good it is with quantities of Guinness.
